TEXTILE BOOM SEEN IN FALL RIVER VOTE
Mills Expected to Be Busy for Months as Result of Strike Ban
An era of prosperity such as the textile industry of New England has not seen since the close of the war is anticipated by its New England leaders, as a result of the anti-strike vote recorded by the 40,000 workers in the Fall River district. While two of the labor organizations affiliated with the Fall River Textile Council voted for a strike, rather than the acceptance of a 10 per cent wage reduction, the remaining organizations voted to accept the cut.
Under the rules of the council, all the organizations are bound by a majority vote.
Already plans are being made to put the Fall River mills on full time and the leaders declare that within a few months time the thousands of workers, many of whom are now disgruntled at the cut, will be satisfied that a majority of the council acted wisely.
"We had to do something to compete with the Southern mills," declared one large operator who maintains office in Boston, today.
"The Southern mills were taking our business away from us right and left. Under the old wage scale we could compete with the South by selling at a loss."
It is apparent that it would be cheaper for the men with money to invest to close down the mills than to run them with a deficit piling up each month.
"I don't think there is an operator in New England who favored cutting wages of the workers," he declared. "If New England is to remain the textile center of the country it has to meet this Southern competition. Our selling agents are confident that with the lowered labor costs and with further reductions through the establishment of scientific production methods perfected to the last degree, they can pile up orders that will keep all our mills busy for months to come."
OTHERS MUST AID.
"Now it's up to the growers, the landowners and others to realize that they must bear a share of the burden that has been placed on the workers. Let them cut their margins of profit a little. The workers will have the same purchasing power as they will have the money to pay their bills and there will be general prosperity."
In the strike vote taken among the six unions identified with the Fall River Council, the millmen, the weavers and the finishers in favor of rejecting the 10 per cent wage cut and also voted overwhelmingly in favor of a strike.
The yarn finishers voted unanimously to accept the cut, while the carders voted 49 to 33 to accept the wage cut, but under protest.
The shawl trimmers voted unanimously to accept the cut, while the Loomfixers' Union voted 116 to 148 against accepting the cut but also voted 183 to 147 in favor of a strike. The laws of this union require that two-thirds of the members must favor a strike before the motion is carried. The strike adherents lacked the required majority, thus making four organizations to two against the strike.
While similar wage cuts have been made in the smaller textile fields of New England, the Fall River district is the largest where wage adjustments have been carried out. This action is expected to have no important influence on other fields operating on a competitive basis.

mercy of France, for the reason that Germany had no flying machines and therefore she might as well have no men.
Her sixty-five millions of population would be utterly helpless against one hundred Frenchmen up in the air. If one French machine were shot down over Germany, a half dozen German cities could be destroyed the same day.
THIS COUNTRY ought to learn something from the helplessness of Germany, based entirely on the fact that she has no force in the air, although she has millions of highly trained fighting men. Let us also remember that in the air Germany is no more helpless than the United States at this moment.
ITALIAN SOCIALISTS and Communists demand a revolution to get rid of Mussolini. The crisis here, whatever it is to be, is not far off. Italy would have had a revolution five or six years ago had not Mussolini taken charge in the belief of some that understand such matters.

REFUSES TO COMMUTE TO NASHUA, N. H., WIFE ASKS DIVORCE

RUBBER DEALER SUED

There Is an Intimation That Oliver P. Hussey Prefers Life in City

Brouse Oliver P. Hussey, treasurer of the Phillips Rubber Co., of Boston, won't commute on the choo-choos all the way to Nashua, N. H., each night after closing his desk. Mrs. Anna F. Hussey, who lives in Nashua all the time, wants a divorce.

Incidentally, according to his lawyer in Boston, Mrs. Hussey charges that her treasurer-husband refuses to give up the society of other women friends.

The divorce action filed in Nashua by the wife has caused a sensation. Both Mr. Hussey and the husband are members of old, prominent and wealthy families.

In her suit, Mrs. Hussey asserts that Hussey has refused to make the country's trip from Boston to Nashua as a dutiful husband should. She asks custody of the children, Hussey has filed answers in the suit through his attorney and a deal of lively testimony is expected when the suit comes to trial.

WINS $5,000 VERDICT FROM WALES' HOSTESS

New York, Jan. 8.—Sarah Hudson, 17-year-old, was awarded $5,000 today by the Supreme Court jury, which, for two days, listened to testimony in her damage suit against Mrs. James A. Boston's Only Self-Acting Reduction Basement Giving Legal Stamps

Photo shows gaudy rubbish receptacle placed on sidewalk in front of King's Chapel, Tremont and School streets. Inset of Charles I. Burdell, a vestryman of King's Chapel, who acted as spokesman in requesting the city officials to remove the offending can.

Urges 'Second Boston Tea Party' to Get Rid of Flaming Ads.

"Boston needs some men who will do with the flaming rubbish cans on our streets what their forebears did with the British tea."

"The cans should be collected by a band of good citizens and dumped into the harbor."

This was the language used by a worshipper at King's Chapel, Tremont and School streets, after one of the offensive advertising receptacles had been placed within the shadow of that historic edifice.

SHAN TO BE REMOVED.

Officers of King's Chapel were aroused when they found one of the gaudy containers placed at the doorway of the chapel.

"As soon as a suitable committee has been selected we will remove the can," was the reply of John H. Noyes, chairman of the Street Commission, when the influential officials of the chapel wrote a letter of protest to Mayor Curley, and the Mayor referred the matter to Mr. Noyes.

Charles I. Burdell, a vestryman of King's Chapel, and a member of the Governor's Council, acted as spokesman in requesting the city officials to remove the offending can.

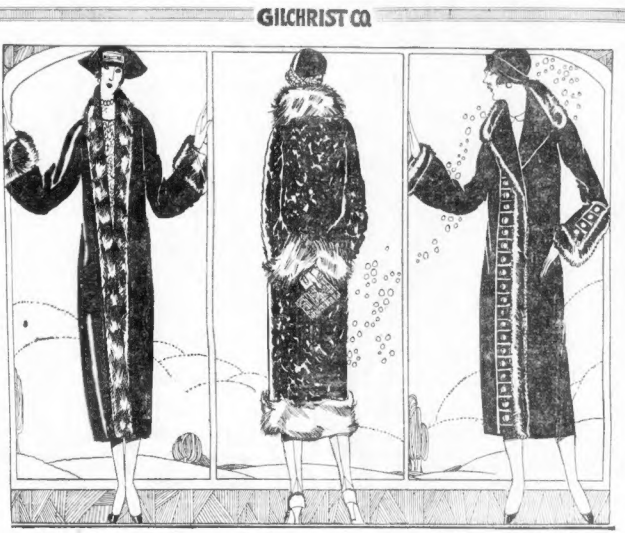

CALLED DESPECATION.

Mr. Burdell, in discussing the matter, said: "Although the Mayor's letter was cordial enough, referring my complaint to the street commissioner, the refusal to act on the sidewalk right in front of the church, just to one side of the main entrance."

"King's Chapel is one of the landmarks of the city. People visit it from all sections of the country and some from abroad. It is degrading to stick such a flamboyant contrivance like that in front of a historic and sacred edifice."

Leather Merchant Wins Big Award Against Lynn Storage Company

Awards totaling $309,38 were made to two plaintiffs by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in Boston today. Both awards upheld verdicts of the lower court.

Moskita Sennato, Russian leather merchant, was awarded a verdict of $123,416 in the suit against the Lynn Storage Warehouse, Sennato sued for remuneration for 1200 boxes of leather which he brought to Boston in 1917 and which were stored at the time in the Lynn warehouse. The boxes, he alleges, were diverted to other parties.

Bernest Witte was awarded $178,960 in his suit against the New England Oil Refining Company which arose, he claimed, out of his failure to receive a guaranteed percentage of "residue" shares from the formation and development of certain South American oil fields.

WOMAN FALLS 3 STORIES; MAY DIE

Mrs. Nellie Sullivan, seventy years old, of No. 4 Ramsey street, (Upham) Corner, fell today from the kitchen window of her home, three floors above the ground.

She is at City Hospital suffering from a fractured skull, two broken arms, two broken legs and other injuries. She is not expected to live.

Mystery surrounds the accident. Mrs. Sullivan, 70, of No. 4 Ramsey street, looked out of her rear window about 8 o'clock and saw Mrs. Sullivan lying on the ground. Mrs. Sullivan's husband rushed out and carried the woman up the stairs to her apartment.

There he found her husband. Tim Sullivan, found her lying in a pool of blood. He rushed her to the hospital.

Apparently she had been peering into the kitchen stove for her husband was covered with stove polish and an iron box lay on the kitchen floor. Her husband said he had heard no noise and the police are trying to learn whether the woman jumped or fell from the window.

For some time she has been suffering from heart attacks, her husband says. Only a few weeks ago she and her husband celebrated their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary.

After an exchange of shots lasting several minutes, a bullet from the postmaster's rifle killed one robber. The other escaped.

Passengers Rush for Exits; 3 Firemen Slightly Injured.

Passengers on a Bunker Hill-Sullivan square trolley car in Charlestown were thrown into a panic when the street car and engine 32 of Charlestown collided in front of the engine house on Bunker Hill street.

Captain James H. Ryan and Firemen Patrick F. Collins and Joseph P. Newman were injured when they were hurled to the pavement by the force of the impact. Thomas H. McLaughlin, driver of the engine, jumped just before the crash and was uninjured.

The street car was in charge of Motorman Thomas O'Donnell of Bunker Hill street, Charlestown, and Conductor David Murphy.

According to O'Donnell's statement the car was proceeding slowly on Bunker Hill street when it arrived in front of the fire station. Suddenly the fire house door opened and the engine came hurtling a wide turn into the street.

The fire engine hit the forward bumper of the trolley and skidded halfway around in the street.

The passengers, none of whom were injured, were quelled by the driver of the street car as they dashed to the door.

None of the firemen were seriously hurt.

PAPAGO'S TISWIN IS PUT UNDER LAW'S BAN

ARRESTS DUE IN PROBE OF 'FIRE PUISANCES'

All Boston apartment house owners who have been ordered by the city to equip their property with fire escapes, sprinklers or other fire protection equipment, and who have ignored such order, will be cited in contempt of court proceeding if the plan of city officials are carried out.

The same will apply to private houses and to owners of all semi-public buildings. It is understood.

In the meantime, Building Commissioner Charles A. O'Brien and Health Commissioner Dr. Francis N. Mahoney will continue planning as nuisance buildings where the fire laws have been disregarded.

There are approximately 150 semi-public buildings to be inspected.

Eight large apartment houses on Bay State and other streets already have been inspected. The plan was to take on conspicuous portions of the buildings and a list of the buildings given to the police so that patrons may make sure the cards are not removed.

Seven private hospitals on Bay State road also were inspected and only one slight technical violation of the fire laws was found.

Commissioner Mahoney said there are still several hospitals to be inspected and instructions will be issued that they be equipped with fire escapes extending to every occupied room, corridor and hallway.

In the present ruling, private hospitals are only required to have fire escapes on the premises.

The official tour of inspection began on Bay State street, where six apartment houses were inspected. These houses were without sprinklers, the halls and hallways were cluttered with rubbish, the inspectors said. In some cases, exits not only were locked, but were nailed up.

Objections to the order for sprinklers in all hospital rooms was made by the Private Hospital Owners' Association, on the ground that the sprinklers may be a menace to the patients.

DEMANDS "BEHAVIOR" CLINICS FOR CHILDREN

Atlantic City, N. J., Jan. 8.—The average mother knows more about music and other events on the social calendar than the complex and habits of her children, declared Rudette G. Lewis, State Commissioner of Institutions and Agencies, in addressing a conference of welfare workers.

"Behavior clinics" have been established in Atlantic City for crime prevention," he said. "These clinics should not be restricted to the children of poor families, but should also care for the well-to-do, the wealthy. Even among the elite we find criminal tendencies."

BIG SUGAR FIRMS TO FIGHT BAN ON MERGER

Washington, Jan. 8.—An application to the Federal Court in New York prohibiting the merger of the American Sugar Refining Company and the National Sugar Refining Company of New Jersey will be filed at once in the Federal Court for the Southern District of New York, Attorney-General Clegg was notified today.

The Government will contest the application, holding that under the Sherman anti-trust laws the merger of these corporations would constitute a combination in restraint of trade.

Little old Peter Denny, proprietor of a small grocery store at No. 22 Cleveland street, Somerville, ever knows that a little act of charity some day might save him his back.

It did, however, when a shabby dressed man entered his store and asked Peter if he would give "a poor fellow a can of beans."

"The fellow," quoth Peter, "seeing that you are hungry."

"I'll take a half of bread in on the beans, too," countered the shabby man.

"I can spare that too," Peter replied.

"You're a pretty good sort of a fellow, mister," said the stranger.

"I'm here to look you up and my old man is outside with a gun, too, but I'm not going to use it."

With that the stranger left, leaving the bread and beans on the counter, started out of the store.

Masked "K's" to March

Beverly, Mass., Jan. 8.—The Ku Klux Klan will hold their annual parade in Beverly on February 24. It was announced in a circular letter today. This day has been exempted from the State anti-mask law.

Strengthened by the result of the vote in Massachusetts, he said, opponents of the amendment have been widely disseminating news matter "telling the line of what passed for argument in the campaign of that State."

"If Congressional legislation dealing with the subject is an unwelcome interference with secret societies," Senator Walsh argued, "nobody can expect to be isolated by the State."

"The real answer," he continued, "is that the whole civilized world has arrived at the conviction that all laws must be consistent with the twin of the sanctity of the home."

LADY FROM LYNN TO GIVE ALL HER TIME TO LAW MAKING ON HILL

'LADY FROM LYNN' TO GIVE ALL HER TIME TO STATE

Mrs. Harriet Russell Hart, the "Lady from Lynn," leaped back in her chair on the floor of the House of Representatives today and whimsically smiled at the question the interviewer had put to her.

"Pleased by this big gathering of men," she smiled. "No, not at all. I am used to having them around by this time. You know, I've been married over a score of years and I've served with them on church and school boards and all sorts of public service bodies. Why should I be flattered?"

It was the "Lady from Lynn" second day in the House. Of course, it was a novelty to her, and a very interesting one at that. Yesterday was the first day of her term, and it was indeed a happy one, she said. There's something strikingly odd about this lady legislator's personality. It is a result in the east of her comely face and soft twinkle of the eyes. A choice combination of the ideal mother and the woman of public affairs. Here is a tolerant sense of humor, an alert perception of things and people as they really are and a charming graciousness of lofty spirit.

Tenaciousness of her first day as a legislator and her plan of activity was what the interviewer was seeking. They were obtained, but before Mrs. Hart started to answer questions she took occasion to reveal a dominant streak of femininity.

"Those pictures your photographer took yesterday must look awful," she remarked.

"Happosible," replied the interviewer. The "Lady from Lynn" smiled and went on:

"I found the first day's session extremely interesting and absorbing from start to finish. I liked the old-time custom of delegating a committee to go out and wait on the Governor and lead him in. It seemed so like so much red-tape, but yet interesting."

"A GREAT DAY."

"My reception here has been very warm. Every courtesy has been shown me, and I feel not very much like a woman among hosts of men, but a more representative like the other 239."

"It was a great day in my life—a wonderful day."

"I entered upon my duties here with a perfectly clear conscience. I expect all my time to them. Some mothers can go into this sort of public service, but my family is grown up."

"I have three daughters, the 21-year-old twins, Annabelle and Miriam, now juniors at Boston University, while 17-year-old Esther is able to take care of herself at home. I plan to keep up my interest in home-making, however."

"I don't expect to do very much at the start. I've got to wait the ropes. I don't want to make myself conspicuous right away. No, I'm going to be a wise widow and wait the others."

"I got two very good committee assignments—protection—the Education and Social Welfare—and I expect to be kept busy on matters which I'm very interested in."

"GOT THE SEAT."

Mrs. Hart said she felt more than ever convinced that more women ought to come into the Legislature, and she would do all she could to encourage them. "I don't want to made gun play, robbery, and homicide must be stamped out."

Governor Fuller urged the encouragement of the industries of the State, attraction of commercial disputes, the prevention, the reduction of taxes, cooperative associations for agriculturists and strengthening of the Blue Sky laws.

The inaugural ceremony took place at a joint session of the Senate and House in the House chamber. President Wallington White presided and administered the oath to Governor Fuller and Lieutenant-Governor Frank G. Allen, President Wells predecessor.

As the former lieutenant governor took the oath as the fifth governor of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, word was flashed to C. Battery, 10th Field Artillery, 18th Division on the Common, and the official salute of seventeen guns boomed out.

At the same time changing H. Cox, retiring governor, took no part in the ceremonies, walked out of the State House a private citizen again.

Announcement that the new Governor had taken the oath was made by Secretaries of State Presidents W. Cook, and immediately Governor Fuller gave his inaugural.

Early in the morning the executive offices were banked with flowers, the tributes of admirers of Governor Fuller, and Lieutenant Governor Allen. Following the custom of years, they were distributed among the hospitals of the city following the inauguration.

At one of his last official acts, Governor Cox turned over to his successor the official seal of the Executive Council. Made of wood from U. S. Frigate Constitution, the seal was accepted by Governor Curtis Guild in 1904.

The retiring governor also turned over a plaque containing the prehistoric stone and arrow heads excavated in East Sandwich from the Indian fort at Scorton Heights.

The gallery in the House chamber was jammed with spectators when the inaugural ceremonies began. Only the Governor, Lieutenant Governor and members of the executive council were sworn into office, the other State officials who were chosen at the November election taking their oaths of office January 21. They are the Secretary of State, Treasurer, Auditor and Attorney General.

London, Jan. 8.—Ten millions bobbed and shingled British women threaten to strike on account of the high charges of hair dressers.

to emerge from the building. They ran down Chelsea street and escaped down a side street.

A moment later the entire building burst into flames.

Engine 9 and Ladder 2 were the first companies to respond to the alarm and it was members of these companies that were injured.

As Daniel Crowley of Engine 9 and Fred W. Goodrich of Ladder 2 were trying to force an entrance to the burning building, a plate glass window broke. The falling glass severed the four fingers of Crowley's left hand and cut a deep gash in Goodrich's left hand and arm.

As the injured men were being rushed to the hospital three of their companions were caught in a blast of flame and smoke when they burst open a door leading into the furnace-like building.

John Gilbrook of Engine 9 was badly burned about the head, face and neck; Eugene Doherty of Ladder 2 was burned about the face and hands, while similar burns were sustained by Leo Murphy, also of Ladder 2.

All the injured were taken to the East Boston Relief Hospital.

The old church and its contents were destroyed, with a loss of $5,000. The business is owned by Vincenzo Passero and Angelo Coggino.

Checker Taxi

Is Logically The Cab For You

Have you kept track of the cab companies which have operated in this city from time to time—do you know how many have appeared and disappeared in the last few years?

You are aware, doubtless, that any five men can form a cab company and operate it without any backing. They can buy cabs on the installment plan, and have nothing on which a court can levy to satisfy a judgment.

Any concern entrusted with the lives and limbs of the people should be morally and financially sound. It should have the means to supply proper equipment, proper system and proper protection.

You will not patronize a store or a bank or a lawyer or a doctor unless you know them to be competent and decent and reliable. Why should there be any difference in the cab business?

Checker Taxi is morally and financially sound. It is one of the most successful taxi companies in the country. Isn't that the cab for you and the members of your family?

FULLER DECLARES WAR ON AUTO-PIRKS, BOOTLEGS AND GUNMEN

ECONOMY AND REDUCTION OF TAXES AMONG DEMANDS OF NEW GOVERNOR

Principal Demands by Fuller in Address

GOVERNOR FULLER made many recommendations in his inaugural, among them being the following:

The following is the text of Governor Fuller's address today:

"Government today is more complicated than in the earlier generations that have passed into history. The pioneer work of establishing a form of government and deciding the fundamental details and the primary steps in organizing the various departments, agencies, have been quite generally completed. The perfecting of this work will be on the part of the end of the line."

"Aside from these matters and the untoward problems which generation after generation has brought to the work here in Massachusetts, the main problem of today is a vast administrative concern, the Commonwealth itself, keeping that Commonwealth on the true path of progress and meeting squarely the issues connected with such an undertaking."

To Encourage Industry

"Every proper and reasonable aid and encouragement should be given to the industries of Massachusetts, in order to stimulate business and production and promote the general prosperity."

"The frequent exploitation by unscrupulous schemers of fraudulent and worthless ideas, in which the savings of a lifetime of thrift of many people are not made it imperative that the Commonwealth exert every effort to prevent such operations in the future."

"The crime situation was described as 'intolerable' by the Governor. 'Crimes of violence in Massachusetts have become so frequent as to demand the most rigorous handling by all law enforcement agencies,' he said."

Arbitration of Disputes

"The prompt settlement of disputes or misunderstandings arising out of commercial intercourse or agreements is highly desirable and, in fact, very essential to the efficient and successful handling of business in large volume."

"Because of the congested condition of our courts, and the very nature of a suit at law, long delays ensue at times in the trial of cases and such business is kept at a standstill and great expense is incurred, all of which is wasteful and is paid by the public."

"A practical solution of at least a substantial part of this problem seems to lie in legislation providing for the arbitration of commercial disputes arising out of contract. Such arbitration is in successful operation in one or two States at the present time."

"This solution would make possible the speedy disposal of such disputes by men familiar with the nature and needs of the business in dispute and would at the same time relieve the pressure due to new cases presented to our courts."

"Agriculture in Massachusetts would be a lessening of the burden upon the Commonwealth."

Governor Demands Safeguards for All Industries

Governor Fuller, in his inaugural, declaring for aid and encouragement for Massachusetts industries, said:

"Every proper and reasonable aid and encouragement should be given to the industries of Massachusetts, in order to stimulate business and production and promote the general prosperity."

To Encourage Industry

"Every proper and reasonable aid and encouragement should be given to the industries of Massachusetts, in order to stimulate business and production and promote the general prosperity."

"The frequent exploitation by unscrupulous schemers of fraudulent and worthless ideas, in which the savings of a lifetime of thrift of many people are not made it imperative that the Commonwealth exert every effort to prevent such operations in the future."

"The crime situation was described as 'intolerable' by the Governor. 'Crimes of violence in Massachusetts have become so frequent as to demand the most rigorous handling by all law enforcement agencies,' he said."

Arbitration of Disputes

"The prompt settlement of disputes or misunderstandings arising out of commercial intercourse or agreements is highly desirable and, in fact, very essential to the efficient and successful handling of business in large volume."

"Because of the congested condition of our courts, and the very nature of a suit at law, long delays ensue at times in the trial of cases and such business is kept at a standstill and great expense is incurred, all of which is wasteful and is paid by the public."

"A practical solution of at least a substantial part of this problem seems to lie in legislation providing for the arbitration of commercial disputes arising out of contract. Such arbitration is in successful operation in one or two States at the present time."

"This solution would make possible the speedy disposal of such disputes by men familiar with the nature and needs of the business in dispute and would at the same time relieve the pressure due to new cases presented to our courts."

"Agriculture in Massachusetts would be a lessening of the burden upon the Commonwealth."

REVISION OF CIVIL SERVICE LAWS TO GET RID OF INEFFICIENT EMPLOYEES, URGED

Drunk Autoists Must Be Dealt With Swiftly

"Criminal carelessness and drunken drivers must be swiftly and severely dealt with by the proper authorities. Spread in congested areas and at intersecting streets must be regulated, even though at great inconvenience to motorists."

"It would be well to consider also a more complete examination of applicants for driver licenses, to ascertain whether or not they are fit to drive, or, in any other defect, makes such applicant unqualified to operate a motor vehicle."—From Governor Fuller's inaugural address.

Railroads

"It is of vital importance, and especially so in an industrial Commonwealth like Massachusetts, that its railroads be able to render efficient service at reasonable cost to the public. The railroad situation and rate question are outstanding problems of the present day."

"The Commonwealth of Massachusetts is deeply concerned in this important matter and in any re-making of the railroad map and about with developments closely and be prepared to make its voice heard."

"The New England Committee, modeled by the Governors of New England, has criticized the operation of some of our railroads severely. It is encouraging to note that the two largest systems of New England report in place of a large deficit in 1924 a moderate surplus in 1925."

State Finance

"In the many and varied activities of the Commonwealth expending annually millions of dollars, new ventures and new theories should be most carefully tested before they are adopted."

"Disparities recommending increases in appropriations should also furnish information as to where and how the additional revenue is to be obtained."

"The mere asking for appropriations without any thought as to how the money is to be secured, may be a serious process upon the way of running a department, but it tends to extravagance, carelessness and loose management."

"It is true that 'general taxation' or 'general revenue' may be suggested as a routine answer to such a query, but it does not square with the least sense."

"The goal to which we should direct our continued efforts is a Commonwealth that is self-sufficient."
